With Excel's spreadsheet power and Word processing magic, they are a power duo to create projects. Even if there isn't a direct conversion method, if you need to convert from Excel to a Word document, there are several ways to do it. The instructions in this article apply to Excel and Word 2019, 2016 and Excel and Word for Microsoft 365. In addition, although Excel has an Export option, there is no built-in way to export to Word from Excel. Instead, you should use one of the methods described here to move data from an Excel document to a Word document. The first method is the simplest, and you are probably already aware of it. You can easily convert your Excel work into Word by copying and pasting it. To start, open the Excel document from which you want to copy. Open the Word document you pass through. In Excel, select the content to copy. If you want the entire page, select the triangle icon at the top left of your work. With the selected content, tap Ctrl-C on your keyboard (Cmd-C for Mac users) to copy it. In word, place your cursor where you want to stick your work. Use Ctrl-V (Cmd-V for Mac users) to stick. You can also use copy and paste to create a new table in Word. Simply create a Word table, select the data in Excel, and then copy it directly to the new table you've created. Unlike copying and pasting, inserting Excel as an object inserts a miniature version of your Excel document into Word, along with several sheets and other features. With Excel and Word open, take steps to start converting. In Word, select Insert into the ribbon. Select the Insertion tab and choose the Object icon from the toolbar. Select Text in the File Dialog box and search for your Excel file. Want your object to be updated automatically if you change the Excel spreadsheet? Select Options - link to the file. Select Insert in the bottom right corner of the dialog box to place the content. In Word, select Insert Object. Select the Create tab from the Browse file. Look for the file to insert. Select Insert. If you want to link it to a file, turn on the Link to File checkbox. Select OK. You can also use an online converter to convert Excel to Word. Find an online converter by doing a quick online search. Then download your two separate documents and allow the converter to do the heavy lifting. When the process is complete, you can download your new document.
